Canyon Park Land Deal May Be Delayed

Protests Against the Purchase Have Been Filed

The deal for the purchase of 42 acres of Grand Canyon Park under a ten-year lease and option agreement was practically consummated by the city council Tuesday night when it adopted a motion instructing the mayor and city clerk to execute the lease as soon as the legal preliminaries are settled. Councilman J. H. Plate, who last week declined to vote on the proposal, voted for it Monday.

Two protests were filed, one by the Contra Costa building trades council and the other by the Ku Klux Klan on the ground that the price asked was too high.

Under the agreement the city acquires that portion of the park lying between the Chateau and the concrete bridge, including all of the creek in this district. The city is to pay $5000 July 1, and rentals of $469 per month, which in ten years would secure title to the property.

Auto Kills Woman in Safety Zone; Injures Four Others

Mrs. Grace M. Williams, 29, Andrade Apartments, Richmond, was fatally injured and four other women sustained minor injuries when they were struck down by an automobile driven by Alfred Paolini, 36, Berkeley laborer, while they stood in a safety zone at 9th and Macdonald 10:30 Sunday night. Paolini is being held in jail.

The others injured were Mrs. Ruth M. Clark, Miss Natalie Heyman, Miss Bernice Blunder and Miss Lorrette Thomas. All were able to go to their homes.

According to officers Paolini declared that he was blinded by the lights of another car as it turned the corner at Ninth street into Macdonald avenue. An investigation of the case is being made by Assistant District Attorney H. V. Alvarado.

Driver of Death Car Is in Jail

Alfred Paolini, charged with manslaughter following the death of Mrs. Grace M. Williams who, it is alleged, he ran down with an automobile Sunday night, was in the county jail at Martinez Tuesday following his arraignment by Justice of the Peace John Roth. Bail was fixed at $10,000. H. V. Alvarado is handling the case for the district attorney's office.

The remains of Mrs. Williams will be shipped to Bremerton Wash. for burial. She leaves a husband and four children.

Bank Bar Property Is Closed For One Year

According to notices posted on the old Bank bar front door at Seventh and Macdonald, that institution will be closed under the abatement act for one year, if judgment is given. Frequent violation of the Volstead act is the cause of this valuable piece of property being subject to the law. The proprietor, Mike Lecey, has removed all the fixtures, previous to the filing of papers by the federal authorities.

Bank bar is one of the historic places of Richmond, and was the headquarters for politicians and the sporting element in the days when "Billy" Logan presided as mixer of decoctions of "spirits frumenti," "gineal fizzes," etc.

Loud Whistling For Crossings Peace Disturber

Lessons in Thrift Are Taught in All Our Schools

Berkeley, April 5.—"Bank Day" is eagerly awaited each week by the school children, who are learning the lessons of thrift in a practical way, which will be of inestimable value to them in after life.

There are 5000 children in the Berkeley schools who have school accounts. The school savings roll in the United States, which is composed of cities having at least 75 per cent of the children with school savings accounts, comprises 207 cities. With 850 new accounts Berkeley will gain the distinction of attaining a place on the honor roll.

Improvement Up to Property Owners

Whether the subway under the tracks of the Santa Fe railroad at Sixteenth street will be opened will depend on whether the property owners of the south side of the city petition to the council to have the improvement made. This was the opinion of the council held Monday evening. It was estimated that the cost would be $26,909.95, and that an assessment district taking in all of the lots, one-half block south of Macdonald avenue and running to the bay and from Thirteenth to Twentieth street would have to be formed. The assessment on the lots would run from $2.10 to $20.

ENGLISH INNS ODDLY NAMED

Distinctions Made Centuries Ago Are Retained by Proprietors of Public Resorts Today.

When Judge Cheney and wife were traveling in Scotland and the north of England a few years ago, Mrs. Cheney made notes of some of the quaint names of the inns in the countryside towns. Centuries ago when the common folk could not read, the signs contained gayly painted pictures of animals and birds which every one could understand, underneath which the artist printed their names. Mrs. Cheney made a memorandum of many of these names in her notebook and here are some of them:

Buffalo Head, Red Lion, Sow and Pig, Adam and Eve, Coach and Horses, Tiger's Head, Wheat Sheaf, Rose and Crow, Live and Let Live, Chequers, Three Pigeons, Trowl and Hammer, Cross Hands Inn, Star and Garter, Dog and Duck, Eagle and Child, The White Hart, Red Cow, Black Boy, Cock and Bull, Two Horses, Pig in the Pound, Swan and Castle, Dog and Partridge, Seven Stars.—Los Angeles Times.

FARMS IN NEW YORK CITY

New York city, with its vast area of 300 square miles, still includes a good many farms, according to the last census. They number 800 in all, comprising about 20,000 acres.

But this number is less than half the number of farms in the city 20 years ago, says the Outlook. The value of the 800 farms is more than $35,000,000, of which only about one-ninth is credited to buildings. Another generation will doubtless see the transformation of most of these farms into city lots.

Automobiles make business for a multitude of stores, for it is said that for every 167 automobiles in the United States there is one repair shop while there is one automobile supply company for every 156 automobiles. EASY TO BE MISUNDERSTOOD

Listener Should Not Be Hasty in His Judgment of Fellow Passengers' Conversation.

In a quiet corner of a restaurant sat four lady clerks, each tending with an after-lunch cigarette. Four more earnest, intelligent faces it would be hard to find in similar surroundings. One credits them with talking "shop," keenly interested in the details of their work; or perhaps it is some social question that knits their brows and informs their speech.

One takes a new interest in this higher type of feminine development, and rises to leave them to their problems.

It is a breath of irony that puffs this phrase from their table into one's ear—"I certainly like him better since he waved his hair."

In a suburban train three ladies, young and fair, sit in animated conversation. They bandy talk with a sparkle of pleasure in their eyes, but from the opposite corner it is not possible to hear what they say, even if it were polite to make the attempt.

"More butterflies," one muses, trying not to be interested in the magazines they are waving about in their excitement. "Dancing, or the play," and one leaves it at that until, crossing the compartment to alight, one catches the words: "I think it is the most informative series of lectures in the whole Extension course."—London Daily Chronicle.

WOMEN TURN TO INVENTION

Labor-Saving Devices for the Home Figure Largely in the English Patent Office.

Today in England there are more women inventors than ever before. Last year was a boom year for the patent office, and a large percentage of the applicants for patents (85,500 in all) were women.

Women outnumbered men with inventions for the home. The shortage of domestic servants has stimulated women to think out improvements in the running of the British household. Last year the inventions covered almost every department of home labor.

English women are conservative in their home fixtures, but they are beginning to take a real interest in the many inventions on the market. Electricity is not installed in every English home, and so a hand vacuum washer for clothes has had a great sale.

Steam heat also is missing in this country, and so a fire grate which pivots around, warming two rooms simultaneously, is an invention of last year which is going well. Another recent discovery is the fire-place, which can be converted from a closed gas fire to an open fire grate by pressing a button.—London Correspondence in the New York Tribune.

Prosperity Is Running Wild and Rampant

First Cherries Arrive in Chicago from Vacaville Easter Day

Vacaville, April 5.—Cherries were shipped east several weeks earlier this year on account of the unprecedented "summer" weather in March. The box shipped brought $1500 in Chicago, where it was auctioned off during a blizzard and snowstorm, a sharp contrast to the sunny weather in California.

It is said that the courthouse baseball nine has reorganized for the coming season, and that George Meese will play second instead of first, Zeb Knott being substituted for the initial sack. Meese weighs 375 pounds, it is said, and the contact of a base stealer with him on second will be "terrible," and will save the catcher much heaving to the second-base station.

Industrial Activity Is Breaking Records in East

(Special Correspondence).

Chicago, Illinois, April 5.—Anyone who has traveled across this country recently must be impressed by the fact that all sections, all industries, all units, large and small, are experiencing the greatest industrial activity since 1919.

The readjustment period is undoubtedly over and the solid business expansion being shown this first quarter is recognized by business men, bankers and manufacturers in every part of the country.

The automobile industry, which is the barometer of the buying power of the people, shows unprecedented activity.

If the incoming congress can refrain from harassing the country with uncalled for and unnecessary freak and drastic legislation, there is every reason to believe that the next few years will witness the greatest prosperity and growth that this nation has ever known.

Thief Procured Clothes By Using a Fish Pole

Trousers which residents of Hammond, Ind., hang carefully on bedposts at night and coats and vests which drape the backs of chairs have been disappearing with such regularity that police have been called to aid in solving the mystery. pital for Insane on Ward's Island, opposite New York City. John Doe always had sought a heroic role. Twice opportunity had presented itself, but he had weakened. That was when he was sane. His third chance came after his mind had snapped. This time he made good, but he is unconscious of the dream finally realized.

John Doe is a man of gigantic build, and a special watch was kept on him at the hospital, for attendants said he was classed as a "homicidal maniac," and was the most dangerous man on the island.

When the United States entered the World war John Doe had his first chance to be a hero. He enlisted and went to the front, but in the trenches the roar of shells and pattering of machine gun bullets took the heart out of him. He deserted, and then the desire to be a hero, a killer of men, returned and he joined the German forces, but once more deserted. When the war ended, he returned to America, where his mind snapped and he landed in the hospital.

As the flames cracked around him during the recent catastrophe on the island, and the dense smoke enveloped his gigantic frame, John Doe was seen by attendants leading the weaker to safety. "This way, men; the fire escape is right here," he said quietly. He was the calmest man in the hall of death, but when the flames were quenched, his mind once more became that of a raving maniac. Instead of a hero, and he will never know that in saving the lives of his fellow-unfortunates he had indeed become a real hero.

BABY IS BROUGHT TO LIFE

New York.—Dr. Philip Minnberg of 3771 Twenty-first avenue, Brooklyn, who brought an apparently stillborn twin to life at the maternity hospital, at Forty-fifth street and Fifteenth avenue, on Lincoln's birthday by the use of adrenalin solution, said that both twins were doing so well that it was likely they might be taken out of the incubator in a few days. Instead of being left there for the further two weeks which it had been supposed would be necessary. The twins, Daniel and Dorothy, are the children of Morris and Bertha Isaacson of 6424 Third avenue, Brooklyn. It was the boy who appeared stillborn.

Indian Lodge Tales

By Ford C. Frick

TEARS OF CHRIST

AT THE southern end of the Sangre de Cristo range, not far from Taos, N. M., stands a peculiar peak, peculiar in that certain stones, found at its summit, bear the shape of a cross, some of them so perfect that one would imagine they had been carved from the living rock by the fingers of a skilled sculptor. But more peculiar still is the fact that these stones, no matter how many times they may be broken or crushed, even though they be broken into a dozen fragments, will still retain their shape, every fragment a perfect cross in itself.

About these stones is woven a legend, not of any particular Indian tribe or family, probably started by the early Indian Christians or possibly by the Spanish who settled the country. At any rate it is a beautiful little story, and so characteristic that it is worth relating here. The legend in itself is well known to the Indian and Mexican settlers of the region, and is frequently related, while bits of the rock are to be found in virtually every household. The legend is as follows.

Long years ago, when the country was new, the land was unknown to the white man, but Indian tribes found here a prosperous, well watered country, where they could live in ease, without hard work and without great effort. So the land became populated and each tribe had its own religion and each its own gods, which were worshiped faithfully.

But when the Spanish settlers came into Mexico small parties of them were constantly making journeys northward, where they expected to find gold and silver. In their number were many priests, who were strong in their religious conviction and who hoped to convert the Indian tribes to their belief. And so happened that two of these Indian priests came into the mountain country, where dwelt countless tribes.

These two priests were well received by the tribesmen, who lived with them for long, and they made every effort to convert them to the Catholic faith. But the tribesmen were stubborn and demanded some sign of the strength of the white man's God before they would cease the worship of the stone images which they had set up.

The priests, seeing this, were very sad, and went to the mountain top and prayed for three days and three nights that there might be some sign from heaven, that the tribesmen would be convinced. Finally in answer to their prayer, the Christ appeared on the mountain top and spoke to them and then pleaded with the tribesmen that they would follow the advice of the priests and worship the white man's God. But the tribesmen were obstinate, and so the Christ knelt there on the mountain top and prayed that these Indians might be made to see the right. And as He prayed He wept, and the tears fell from His eyes to the ground, and there they were turned into rocks as fast as they fell.

And every rock was in the shape of a cross, and there were thousands of these rocks on the summit of the mountain. Tribesmen who saw them were amazed, and when they took the rocks in their hands they marvelled. And some there were who broke the rocks, but no matter how many times they were broken, each small fragment still retained its shape and the priests pointed to the rock and said it was the sign from heaven. And the tribesmen heard and were convinced, and therefore they worshiped the white man's God as their own.

Block-Printing of Fabrics.

We are indebted to an Englishman, John Hewson, for the introduction of block printing of fabrics; he coming to America in response to an invitation from Benjamin Franklin. Roller printing—printing designs on textiles with rollers—was invented in 1770 by a Scotchman, Thomas Bell. Today in America a mile an hour is the rate at which one of our modern mills prints textiles. Crepe de chine is today printed in reproductions of old East Indian designs and in the "germ of life" motif, symbolic of their religious belief; also in Persian paisley patterns, with all the glowing color and elaboration of design which characterizes the hand-woven shawls of India and hand-blocked muslins of Persia.

Ultra Microbes.

The ultra microbe is the latest scientific discovery. It is even later than relativity.

As man has his microbes—of typhoid fever or of consumption, say—which slay him with consumption or typhoid, so these microbes are in turn slain by microbes of their own—infinately small things called ultra microbes.

Its uses will be numberless. Suppose, for instance, a water supply is contaminated with typhoid germs. A regiment of typhoid ultra microbes will be put in the water, and in a short time the supply will be pure again.

ARRANGED FOR THE WITNESS

No Need for the Kunnel to Trouble About That Part of the Proceedings.

An attorney in a small southern town, upon entering his office early one morning, was surprised to find an old woman as a client. He greeted her and she returned his salutation, following it closely with a question.

"Kunnel, kin you write me a will?" "Certainly," he replied. "That's my business."

"Val, you knows Mandy, don't you?" she asked.

"Don't believe I do," he replied. "Val, Mandy she's ceased and done left a farm and no kinfolks and no will. All dem children, ova here 'cross de river is claimin' kin wid her, and Ah wants you to write me a will so Ah kin git dat farm."

The lawyer was amazed at the nature of her business, and explained the penalties involved in compounding a felony. He clinched his argument by telling her the will would be void without a witness.

"Dat's awright 'bout de witness, Kunnel," she said, with a smile. "Ah's done paid Deacon Smith fob bits an' a chicken to witness it."—Judge.

U.S. Department of Education and Welfare?

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
NITED STATES Department of Education and Welfare under a cabinet member?

Has congress the power under the Constitution to create such a department? And will congress do it?

These much-veiled questions are brought sharply to the fore by the approval of the President of a plan of reorganization of the executive departments of the government—which includes the establishment of the proposed new department.

There has been for some time a Joint Committee on the Reorganization of Government Departments. Its chairman is Walter F. Brown of Ohio, who is the personal representative of President Harding. He is not a member of congress. The three senators are Reed Smoot of Utah, vice chairman; James W. Wadsworth, Jr., of New York, and Pat Harrison of Mississippi. The three representatives are J. Stanley Webster of Washington, Henry W. Temple of Pennsylvania and R. Walton Moore of Virginia.

This joint committee prepared a plan of reorganization and submitted it to the President for amendment and approval. The President took it up with the cabinet, and then began lively discussions. Now, however, the President has returned the reorganization plan to Chairman Brown with the following letter:

"My Dear Mr. Brown: I hand you herewith a chart which exhibits in detail the present organization of the government departments and the changes suggested after numerous conferences and consultations with the various heads of the executive branch of the government. The changes, with few exceptions, notably that of coordinating all agencies of national defense, have the sanction of the cabinet. In a few instances, which I believe are of minor importance, the principle of major purpose has not been followed to the letter, in order to avoid controversies which might jeopardize reorganization as a whole.

"Permit me to repeat what I have said to the members of the Joint Committee on Reorganization—that I regret deeply the delay in placing our suggestions in your hands. It has been caused solely by the difficulty which has been encountered in reconciling the views of the various persons charged with the responsibility of administering the executive branch of the government.

"With the earnest hope that the suggestions submitted may be of material assistance to the committee in performing its most important task; I am, very truly yours,
"WARREN G. HARDING."

Outstanding features of the recommendations by the President and the cabinet include these:

partment, the Department of Education and Welfare.

The co-ordination of the military and naval establishments under a single cabinet officer as the Department of National Defense.

The transfer of all nonmilitary functions from the War and Navy departments to civilian departments, chiefly Interior and Commerce.

The elimination of all nonessential functions from the Treasury department.

The change of the name of the Post Office department to Department of Communications.

The attachment to the several departments of all independent establishments except those which perform quasi-judicial functions or act as service agencies for all departments.

According to the recommendations of the President and cabinet the new Department of Education and Welfare will have four major subdivisions, each under the charge of an assistant secretary, as follows: Education, health, social service, veteran relief.

Existing bureaus and offices to be transferred to the Department of Education and Welfare are as follows:

From the Department of the Interior: Bureau of education, Indian schools, Howard university, St. Elizabeth's hospital, Freedmen's hospital, bureau of pensions.

From the Department of Labor: Women's bureau (part), children's bureau (part).

From the Treasury department: Public health service.

From the War department: Soldiers' home.

From the Department of Justice: Office of the superintendent of prisons.

SENATOR STERLING

put into effect, it will destroy the liberty of the people, their self-dependence, their sense of initiative and personal responsibility for self-government, and transform them more and more into dependents upon the federal government, thus killing the spirit of democracy.

The advocates of the new department, it is believed, are mainly concerned about the question of constitutionality, since the power to direct or control education is not delegated to the United States by the Constitution. Anyway, Senator Norbeck of South Dakota read into the Congressional Record before congress adjourned an address with the title: "Constitutional and Political Significance of Federal Legislation on Education," by his colleague, Senator Sterling, who introduced the bill.

Senator Sterling analyzes these parts of the Constitution which have a bearing on the "general welfare," sets forth federal legislation as embodied in the several Morrill acts, and concludes thus:

"There are present-day exigencies not within the scope of existing legislation to aid in meeting which is, in my judgment, the imperative duty of the general government. They cannot be met by a submerged and unrelated bureau in the Department of the Interior, empowered to gather and distribute statistical information, nor can they be adequately met by federal contributions only for specific objects to be matched by equal contributions on the part of the states accepting them. The vital importance of the subject, its intimate relation to the well-being and safety of the people—and this is the highest law—as well as the dignity of the subject, all combine to urge as the next great step the creation of a Department of Education, with its secretary a member of the President's cabinet, whose proper function it shall be not alone to administer funds apportioned to the states, important though this may be, but through investigation and research to cover the whole field of our educational resources and needs; and which, without dictation, without ignoring state plans or encroaching upon the freedom of state initiative, shall from its higher vantage ground encourage, stimulate and lead in every constitutional co-operative educational enterprise that will enhance the general welfare."

Mr. Layton incorporates in his remarks letters from college presidents, state superintendents of education and newspaper editors opposed to the new department. He sets forth in detail twelve reasons why the new department should not be established. His eleventh reason is as follows:

"Eleventh. The plan is plainly unconstitutional and in clear conflict with the reserved rights of the states under our national organic law. If Scotland, measured three-quarters of an inch by one-half an inch. Gray's 'Elegy on a Country Churchyard,' containing 82 four-line verses, has been printed in a space of four inches by three. What is probably the smallest book in the world was published in 1897 by Salma di Padua, one of the Lilliputian printers."—New York Correspondence Indianapolis Star.

Origin of "Ball."

This word, like many other terms used in dancing, came to the language through the French. The French words "bal" (a dance), and "ballet" (to dance), from which our word "ball" is derived, were in turn derived from the Latin and Greek. There is a Greek word meaning "to throw," from which the above words are believed to have come, the inference being that dancing was at first considered a jumping around or throwing the limbs about. At the present time the word "ball" is limited to the more formal social gatherings for the purpose of dancing.

POOR MR. OWL

MR. OWL is a very wise bird, all the wood folks knew, but when he managed to rid the big tree where he lived of Mr. and Mrs. Woodpecker he was looked upon as being wiser than ever.

Mr. Owl had been kept awake all day and nearly all night and the next day, by hammering of the Woodpeckers, who had chosen to make their home in the tree where he lived and he was sleepy and cross—Mr. Owl was, I mean.

"Can't you people stop that noise for awhile and let a fellow sleep?" he asked. "I have to be out at night to make my living and here you folks hammer away all day and last night I was so sleepy I could not go out, though a body could not sleep for your noise."

"We are going to finish our house," retorted Mrs. Woodpecker. "We build our own home. We're not like some folks I know, take the leavings of others."

For a minute Mr. Owl did not reply to this hard thrust of truth, for it was a well-known fact in Woodland that Mr. Owl often took the nest of Mr. Crow or even that of Mr. Squirrel, so he blinked a minute and then said: "Are you going to stop that hammering tonight or not?"

Mr. Woodpecker let his wife do all the talking and she replied that if they finished their work they would stop, otherwise she would go on hammering until the place was as deep as she wanted it.

Mr. Owl could not see very well, but it seemed to him there was much more hammering to be done before things were as Mrs. Woodpecker wanted.

Now Mr. Owl had heard Mrs. Wren and her husband chattering on a limb of the tree that morning about finding place to live because two very rude sparrows had taken the place they had the year before and though they had scolded and threatened they were not able to make the sparrows move out.

"I will tell them about this place," thought Mr. Owl. "The hole they have now will be plenty big enough for the Wrens and they won't hammer my head off as these noisy creatures are doing."

It was not easy for Mr. Owl to get about in daytime but he managed to find Mr. and Mrs. Wren and told them about the fine place they could have if they could drive away the Woodpeckers. "I am sure you can do this when one of them flies away for dinner," said Mr. Owl. "You know they never stop that hammering, for one stays on duty while the other is away."

Mrs. Wren was so excited she could not keep quiet and as soon as Mrs. Woodpecker flew away over went the Wrens, flying straight into the eyes of astonished Mr. Woodpecker, chattering and flapping their wings until he was glad to leave the tree.

It did not take Mrs. Wren a second to inspect the house while her husband stood guard outside. "We will take it," she said, poking out her head, and though it was a noisy battle they had when Mrs. Woodpecker returned with her husband the Wrens kept the house. "Now I will have a little peace," said Mr. Owl solemnly, and all the birds around who had been watching said, "O wise Mr. Owl, how very wise you are indeed."

But alas and alack for Mr. Owl's well-laid plans for peace, in a few days he was holding his ears to shut out the scolding chatter of Mrs. Wren, for he did not know that she was a bad scold.

Mr. Owl knew better than to try to get Mrs. Wren to move. He disliked a quarrel anyway and well he knew he would get the worst of it if he complained of her noisy chattering.

So one night he took his belongings under his wing and silently went away to find another home far from hammering woodpeckers and scolding Mrs. Wrens.

The Kitchen Cabinet

Never mind what the other fellow is worth. He paid for everything he possesses by work, constant and unremitting, and an eternal watchfulness for opportunity. Do you want the same results? Then be prepared to pay the price.—Lloyd.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

When you want a cake especially nice try the following:

Candied cherries are expensive unless you have put them up yourself. Pour hot water over a pound of candied cherries, let stand a few minutes then drain and set into the oven to become dry. Soak one-half pound of crustless bread in as much milk as it will absorb; add four beaten eggs, four tablespoonsful of sugar, four tablespoonsful of warm butter, one-fourth of a pound of boiled and grated chestnuts, and a dusting of cinnamon. When well-mixed add the cherries, pour into a buttered shallow pan, brush generously with butter, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, and bake slowly in a moderate oven. Serve with a cupful of hot chocolate.

Luncheon Eggs.—Wash and chop one-fourth of a pound of mushrooms; melt one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, add the mushrooms and stir until all the moisture is evaporated; add one tablespoonful of flour, blend well, then add one-half cupful of chicken stock, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and a little pepper; let boil two minutes. Cut in halves six hard-cooked eggs, remove the yolks and mix them with the mushroom sauce. Fill the eggs with this mixture and set them into a baking dish, surround with tomato sauce and heat thoroughly. Just before serving place a fillet of cardine on each stuffed egg. Serve from the baking dish.

Sardine Salad.—Skin and bone a dozen sardines, add a cupful of crushed, hard-cooked egg yolks, two tablespoonsful each of chopped olives and celery, a pinch of dry mustard, and onion juice to moisten. Mix and form into balls, roll in boiled rice. Arrange round a mound of stuffed olives and serve garnished with roses of mayonnaise.

A good breakfast dish is "battered oast" served with hot stewed tomatoes, seasoned well with butter, salt and pepper. The tomatoes will have a better flavor if well-cooked with the seasoning and add a little water while cooking.

Horseshoe Salad.—Whip one-fourth of a cupful of heavy cream, add three tablespoonsful of fresh grated horseradish, one tablespoonful of vinegar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, and one-half teaspoonful of onion juice. Serve on baked ham.

Cheerfulness is the daughter of employment. I have known men come home from a funeral in great spirits, just because they had had the management of it.—Horne.

EARLY SPRING SALADS

The following salad is made when fresh tomatoes cannot be procured or are too expensive:

Glaze Tomato Salad.—Dissolve one-eighth of a box of gelatin in a little cold water. Measure half a can of tomatoes, put through a sieve to remove seeds. Season with pepper and salt, seal until boiling, then pour over the gelatin. Put into cups or molds to harden. Remove and place on lettuce leaves with a spoonful of mayonnaise on top of each.

Baked Apple Salad.—Choose a good-sized apple of good variety, such as the Northern Spy. Bake until well done and the skin is loose from the apple. When cool remove the skin and stuff the apple center with nuts. Serve with whipped cream or on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Fruit Salad.—Cut in dice three melon apples, remove the pulp from three oranges. Blanch a cupful of almonds and shred them, dice one cupful of pineapple. Mix all these ingredients and serve on lettuce with a mayonnaise dressing. Garnish with halves of walnut meats and candied cherries.

Celery and nuts cut fine, using one-half as much nuts in measure as celery, add French dressing, let stand for an hour and serve on lettuce.

Lily Salad.—Cut hard-boiled egg whites into petal-shaped pieces, leaving the yolk perfectly whole. Rub each yolk with butter, mustard and vinegar, mixed well. Serve on beds of crisp or cooked spinach with mayonnaise for dressing.

Chestnut Salad.—Mix a little sweet cream into a cream cheese with some finely-chopped sweet green pepper. Divide into pieces and roll in crackers crumbs that have been browned. Shape in the form of chestnut burrs and insert a cooked chestnut in each. Serve with mayonnaise.

The parsnip is especially good served with boiled meats. Sliced or diced cooked parsnips are very good baked in a white sauce as are escalloped potatoes.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL
FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

ROSALIND

IT is popular belief, not fact, that it spreads the use of a name and the only available explanation for Rosalind is that it was invented by Shakespeare especially for the lovely heroine of "As You Like It." There is no other record of its history. Rose, of course, you all know, and there is a Spanish word "linda," which means "fair woman" and comes from the German "lind," signifying "lithic." So etymologists have it, that Shakespeare, seeking a name for his little young masquerader, coined the graceful Rosalind.

Rose appears first as Rohais or Rosalia, from the French and Latin of "rose," meaning fame. In England the first Rohais was the wife of Gilbert of Gaunt. Rose de Lucy was the name of the wife of Fulbert de Dover in the time of Henry II. The Normans carried it to Ireland, where Rose is a favorite among peasants. In Sicily, Rosalia, known as the "darling of each heart and eye," dedicated herself to a hermit life in a mountain grove and won a saintly reputation.

The name took the form of Rosalie in France. It was there that St. Dominic arranged a series of devotions by means of telling beads upon a string. These formed the rosarium, or rose garden, or freely translated, delights of devotion. The Rosarium has a day to itself in the Roman calendar and may possibly have named the transatlantic saint, Rosa di Luina, which gave rise to Rosita. Switzerland calls her Rosel, and France Rosine or Rosette. In England she is Rosanne, sometimes Rosabella, meaning "beautiful rose." From Italy comes Rosina and Rosetta. A more rare, but no less charming interpretation, is Rosalba, signifying "white rose."

Rosalind's jewel is that rare beautiful gem, the flame-hearted ruby. It denotes pride and haughtiness and appoints Tuesday as the fortunate day for its wearer and 8 the lucky number.

The best poetic tribute to Rosalind is paid by Shakespeare through the verses of "Orlando":
From the east to western Ind,
No Jew I like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures, fairest lined,
Are but black to Rosalind. . . .

Helen's cheek, but not her heart;
Cleopatra's majesty;
Atalanta's better part;
Sad Lucretia's modesty,
Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly squad was devised;
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
To have the touches dearest prized.

Flight of Birds.
Certain species of hawks have a speed of 200 feet a second, or about 138 miles an hour, says the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. This might be a suitable rate for a racing airplane. The canvasback duck can fly from 180 to 190 feet a second, but its usual rate is 60 to 70 miles an hour would be pretty fast to be enjoyable in a plane making a pleasure trip.

Real Meaning of Life.
Any one can carry his burden, however heavy, till nightfall. Any one can do his work, however hard, for one day. Anyone can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly, purely, till the sun goes down. And that is all that life ever really means.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

A LINE O' CHEER

TWILIGHT
I DO not mind my years
Though numerous they be,
For I've a thought that cheers
The aging soul of me—
My thought that after all
My days of youthful power,
And high ambition's call,
I've reached my twilight hour.
And since my early youth
With all its hopes so gay
That hour has been, in truth,
The sweetest time of day.

Rare Volumes

A writer on rare books says: "Sometimes the 'rare' books of the world have owed their pre-eminence to oddity of size. There have been the abnormally little books. In the palace of the Emperor in Spain there were volumes six feet in height by four feet in breadth. The Thumb Bible is the size of a postage stamp, yet it contains copper plates. The Midget New Testament, printed in working hours whom you would very much rather not have come to see you at your office or place of business. The day they select to drop in is sure to be your busiest day. "Don't let me disturb you at all," they say, as they tuck themselves into a chair in your office. "I haven't anything else to do so I'll just sit here with a book or a magazine until you are ready to go out for luncheon." Or possibly if you have no office of your own they send in for you to come to see them in the outer office of the establishment where you work, or sit on a stool in front of the counter where you work as salesperson, little realizing that they are jeopardizing your position, possibly, by being seen there during business hours.

There are times when the short call is required by courtesy, but to make that call long is extremely inconsiderate. So when there is illness in a friend's household you should call to inquire for those who are ill and also to ask whether you can be of any service, but your call, if you wish to make yourself a welcome caller, should not be extended over more than five or ten minutes. Likewise a call of condolence should be extremely short. Unless, of course, it is perfectly patent that in making it longer you are of actual assistance or comfort.

TWO DOORS TO MAN'S MIND

Explaining Why All of Us Cannot Awaken From Sleep to Instant Action.

Some of us wake up instantly, but most of us have to lie for some time before we are really awake. How quickly can you wake up?

It has nothing to do with being a hero or a strong man, neither has it anything to do with laziness or being tired the night before.

It all depends on our minds. Every one of us has got two distinct minds, the front mind with which we do our ordinary daytime thinking, and the back mind which comes into action only in the hours of sleep.

Between the two minds lies a door. When you go to sleep you pass into your night mind, when you wake up you pass through the door into your day mind, and close the door behind you.

But with a great many of us this door between our two minds has worked a little loose.

The hinges of that door work slowly; it doesn't slam, and through it float out the broken remnants of your dream in hopeless confusion with the real life of the new day's work.

Then gradually, with an effort, you manage to pull yourself out of the fog and push the dream things back through the door. Then at last you are awake.

This difficulty of waking varies with your circumstances. If something pleasant is going to happen to you in the coming day you can wake up comparatively easily. Your real self is anxious to be finished with the dream world, to shut the door, and to wake to your good fortune.

But when you are troubled, or expecting worry, your dream self invests your sleeping hours with a kindly mantle of romance to make up for the worries of the day. You are loth to leave that pleasant land of dreams, and consequently wake up slowly.

"What's the matter?"
"Here we are living in a flat, and the boy wants a dog, and the daughter wants to have her hair bobbed."

APPARITIONS SEEN IN SKY

Example Mentioned by Defoe Shows How Easily the Imagination of Crowd May Be Excited.

During the Great Plague in London, when in the streets lay heaps of dead bodies, and the terrified imagination of the crowds was easy material to work upon, half-crazed persons thought they saw apparitions of flaming swords held in the air above the city. A woman pointed to an angel clothed in white and brandishing a sword over his head. She described it with such realism that soon the crowd also saw.

Defoe mentions an experience of his: "Yes, says one, I see it plainly; there's the sword as plain as can be. Another said he saw the angel and another the face. One saw one thing and one saw another. I looked as earnestly as the rest, but perhaps without as much willingness to be imposed upon. I said I could see nothing but a white cloud. The woman endeavored to show it to me, but could not make me confess I saw it. So she turned to me, called me a profane fellow and a scoffer, told me it was a time of God's anger through which such doubters as I should wonder and perish."

"Can't I sell you one of these pier glasses, they make a fine addition to any home?" inquired the salesman of the German who was spending some of his newly acquired wealth. "Peer glasses!" exclaimed the German, "vat for I vant peer glasses ven I no longer can get dat peer! Lieber Himmel! Vat a question!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Will Prosperity Continue

And now we are told in the papers that the fear of what the next congress is going to do to the railroads is causing investors to refrain from buying their securities.

People are waiting to see whether radicals will be returned to Congress. In some states, it is claimed there are already indications of a conservative reaction against congressional members of more or less radical tendencies.

It will take a whole lot of reaction, however, to counteract the socialistic agitation that permeates our state legislative and national lawmaking bodies. Continued prosperity in the nation rests upon the ability of our people to see that they must not completely discourage the investor and the developer of new enterprises.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM

"What's this?" asked a medical student in a hotel restaurant, looking critically at the dish the waiter had placed before him.

"Just what you ordered, sir," replied the waiter, "breast of veal, braised."

"You quite mistake," rejoined the guest, removing with his knife and fork a bone from the meat and inspecting it. "This bone is a portion of the left tibia, near its junction with the inner malleolus. In other words, you have brought me a piece of the shank. Take it back and bring what I ordered."

BRITISH FIRST EDITION CLUB

Much interest was recently aroused in London by the loan exhibition of the First Edition club, formed some time ago, admittedly upon lines suggested by the Grolier club of New York. Among exhibits was a copy of "Quartette," the first literary production of Rudyard Kipling in conjunction with his father, mother and sister. Rudyard Kipling settled a frequently debated point by writing to say that he himself wrote nine of the stories appearing in that volume.

THE THIRD CLASS

It was old-fashioned physiology the class was studying. The thin angular teacher had just said there were two classes of skeletons—endo-skeleton and exo-skeleton. "An exo-skeleton is where the skeleton is on the outside of the skin like a turtle," she said, "and an endo-skeleton is when the skeleton is on the inside of the skin, like mine."

A little hand went up. "What do you call them, teacher, when there's some meat between the skeleton and the skin?" a little voice piped.

COLOR SCHEMES ON TRAINS

Each of the "Big Four" railways of Great Britain is to have a distinctive color for its rolling stock. Some of the chocolate and cream coaches that are to represent the Great Western have already appeared at Paddington. They will be drawn by green engines.
